THREE SONS AND THREE BUNDLES OF STICKS

There was once a farmer and his three sons. While his sons were hard workers, they argued with each other all the time. The farmer did his best to unite his sons in a common goal, but the three just thought about themselves.

The farmer decided to teach them a lesson. He gave each son a bundle of ten sticks and said: the son who breaks the sticks the quickest is the best.

The sons each began grabbing one stick at a time and breaking them into pieces. All three finished at the same time, and so began arguing about who was first.

The man sighed but persisted. He gave the sons each another bundle of ten sticks and said: break the sticks again, but this time, instead of breaking one stick at a time, you must break all the sticks at the same time.

Each son attempted to break their bundle in one go. None of them could.

The man smiled and said: "My sons, do you not understand? It is easy to break one stick into many pieces, but it is harder to break many sticks in one go. Separate is weak, together is strong."

The boys now understood – solving problems together made them strong.

"Father, you are right," the sons said, "being united, we can achieve anything. But if we try to do it by ourselves, we will break."

And that is family, said the man.
